Welcome to the North Santiam Canyon, home to the three R's: recreation, relaxation and resources.

If you are looking for recreation, this is the place. Choose your favorite from kayaking, rafting, tubing, skiing, swimming, hiking and golf. Those in the mood for relaxation enjoy fishing and beautiful views. And for those looking for opportunity the area offers both business and natural resources.

Here in the North Santiam Canyon, water is the element that connects the communities of Mehama, Lyons, Mill City, Gates, Detroit and Idanha. The North Santiam River and its tributaries and Detroit Lake form the backdrop for daily life. A magnificent natural setting shapes both work and play in these wonderfully distinct communities.

The North Santiam Guide is your resource to business and recreation opportunities here in the canyon. Businesses listed in the directory play a vital role in the local economy, providing products, services and jobs. The organizations listed enrich the canyon's civic and social life. This guide is produced by the North Santiam Chamber of Commerce and the North Santiam Canyon Economic Development Corporation.

Other rivers in the Willamette system may have more tourists and fanfare, but the North Santiam has the most fish. We think you'll find the communities along the North Santiam also have the most promise!

Leading the way to the future

By Linda Whitmore

When a community learns to set and meet goals – and grow leaders – its future grows measurably brighter.

Oregon suffered an economic blow a couple of decades before the current recession made downturns a national issue. Mill closures obliterated the employment base in many areas.

Responding to rural regions' plight, Roseburg Forest Products' Ford Family Foundation offers grants to help communities pull themselves up again.

Tom Gallagher, director of the Ford Institute for Community Building, credits foundation board member Charlie Walker with making a plan to fit his philosophy that "rural communities would be served best if they had the capacity to solve their own problems."

The foundation helps train leaders and citizens to look at their communities' assets and needs, create plans to meet their priority goals and work together to accomplish a beneficial project. The foundation also helps fund projects when matching money is raised in the communities.

To facilitate training, the foundation works with Eugene-based Rural Development Initiatives. The two organizations share the same commitment, Gallagher said. RDI brings its Leadership Development program to the small-population regions the foundation helps.

Ford Family Foundation provides "money for rural communities and they wanted to train the people who they might want to grant money to in the future," said Nicole Miller who was with the North Santiam Canyon Economic Development Corp. when the canyon's first team was created.

"It's all about community vitality – so we can have empowered citizens, knowledgeable volunteers, people interested in investing their energy in our communities," Miller said.

RDI's Leadership Development training aims to give participants "new skills and build relationships that lead to vibrant communities."

In the fall of 2003, Mill City and Gates combined to be the first communities to take part in the program. It is a five-step process, with intensive sessions spanning five years. The group is nearing completion of the series.

Gallagher explained that sessions one, three and five focus on leadership development, session two is on effective organization and four is about community collaboration.

In addition to being the first to participate, the Mill City-Gates group was the first to have youths participate. The third session was comprised of middle school and high school students.

"That was a lot of fun," Gallagher said, noting that recently he watched two of the young participants, Mitchell Cole and Taylor Gonzales, lead a meeting and "they did a heck of a job."

Training participants include people from teens to "quite senior," he said, folks with experience in community leadership and those who want to develop new skills.

“We hope to develop a broad base,” Gallagher said. Participants learn to work productively, with a plan, and reach a goal in a timely manner, thereby avoiding volunteer burn-out. “We’ve had some tremendous successes.”

The Ford Family Foundation started the program in order to get the most effective results from the financial contribution it makes to communities. By having a wide spectrum of participants, there is a consensus of what is needed in the community – and not a special interest shared by few.

Todd Miller, Gates Elementary School principal, was an instructor in the youth-training phase.

“The focus is to look around your community – making a list of assets and everything good about your town.” The second half goal is to choose a project and make it happen. “It was a real eye-opener for them to see how complicated it is,” he said.

Ford offered to match up to $5,000 for a project, if the students could match it. The ensuing fundraisers helped the students learn to work together as a team.

For their project, the middle-school and high school youths decided the thing they had in common was Santiam High School, so they chose to clean up and refurbish the gym and paint murals there.

“It was a big undertaking,” Miller said. The results were successful. The project gave them a feeling of “Wow! We did that – that’s cool,” he said.

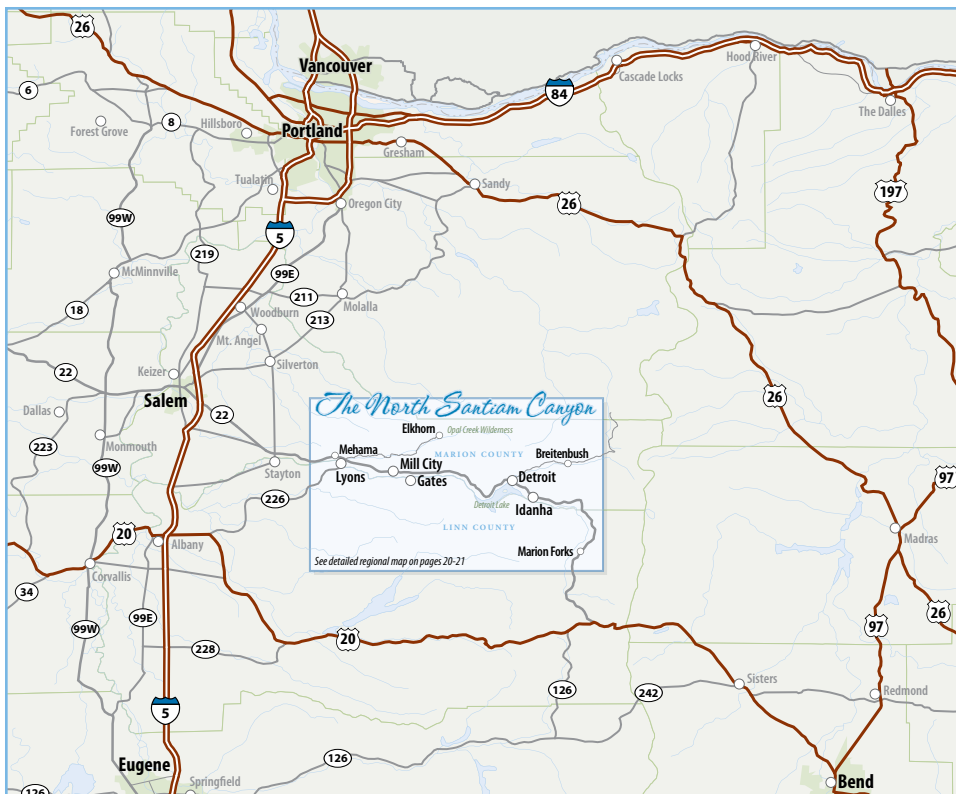

Like the youths, the Mill City-Gates’ adult group established goals for their community-boosting project. Among them were the new entrance sign and gazebo in Gates. Gary Swanson, who was part of the first group to go through the training, said the participants developed a plan and raised matching funds.

Swanson, who is Gates’ fire chief, said making connections with others was an important factor in the process.

“Networking was very valuable. There was a wide diversity. You meet people in other communities. It’s a real critical part of the program.”

Todd Miller said the training is “good for the individuals and good for the community.” He is sending some of his school’s staff members to be part of the next group.

“The hope is that people who go through this will remain leaders in the community. They will get things done,” he said.

Helping the economy GROW

Responding to the North Santiam Canyon's need for an economic development model that fit the region, the North Santiam Canyon Economic Development Corporation adopted Enterprise Facilitation in the fall of 2008, creating GROW North Santiam.

GROW is an organic, bottom-up, people-centric process offering free, confidential business coaching to any entrepreneur or organization that wants to open, expand or improve its business results.

GROW serves the geographic area of Lyons, Mehama, Mill City, Gates, Detroit, Idanha, Aumsville, Stayton and Sublimity.

As of October 2009 GROW had met with 75 clients and sponsored four business openings. Clients represented a wide variety of fields: art, advertising, agriculture/ranching, construction, education, government, healthcare, hospitality, manufacturing, non-profit, publishing, real estate, recreation, retail/wholesale, services and transportation.

Those served have included 38 are new businesses and 37 existing businesses. It is estimated at least 19 or more full time jobs were created, and 21 or more contractor positions developed.

One highlight of GROW's first year was the success of the Cascade Foothills Saturday Faire, an outdoor market in Friends of Silver Falls State Park Nature Store opened in a new location in August 2009 with GROW assistance, and doubled revenues from the previous August. GROW helped them find someone to advise them on the layout and merchandising prior and identify canyon-area vendors who might offer products. As a result, over half of the vendors in the Nature Store are now from the canyon area.

Community involvement is the lifeblood of GROW. Volunteers raise money, publicize results, manage operations, and assist clients with ideas and contacts. An estimated 1,339 volunteer hours were contributed in the organization's first year.

Mehama, an unincorporated community north of the Santiam River, was named after Mehama Smith, the wife of James Smith, who laid out the town site in the 1870s. A decade later, two Irish brothers, James and Henry Lyons, named the community south of the river after themselves. The city of Lyons was incorporated in 1958.

The Lyons and Mehama communities are most easily found by exiting at the distinctive Gingerbread House restaurant along Highway 22. This classic landmark serves as a welcome to the region and the communities embrace the same fun, small-town style.

The area offers many outdoor entertainment opportunities, including wooded trails for walkers, joggers, bikers and hikers; natural wetlands; fishing and boating access to the North Santiam River; Freres City Park and John Neal Campground.

Services include restaurants, stores, service stations, beauty salons, churches, a gift shop, a golf course, a video store, the Mari-Linn School, Lyons City Hall, Lyons Post Office, two fire departments and a public library.

In 1886 four entrepreneurs from Stayton gave Mill City its name when they purchased land next to a falls on the North Santiam River. The men had machinery hauled up on wagons from Stayton and constructed a mill. A small community formed around the mill in the following years and Mill City's first post office was established in 1888. The city was incorporated in 1947.

Today Mill City is the largest community in the North Santiam Canyon. Recreational opportunities include three parks that offer playgrounds, boating, fishing, water activities and picnicking.

The city has a fire hall, a city hall, stores, restaurants, a post office, a pharmacy, a museum, a senior center, a library, a video store, a visitors' center and retail stores.

City Meetings

City Council: Third Thursday, 7 p.m.

Gates was founded as a settlement for miners and loggers who lived in the area during the winter months. A post office was established in February 1882.

Ten years later W.R. Robertson, then postmaster, moved the post office across the river to a place called Gatesville. The name of the post office was changed to Gates, which became the name of the city when it was incorporated in 1950.

Gates is a peaceful little town located three miles east of Mill City along the North Santiam River. Several small pristine creeks and tributaries run through or near Gates, including Rock Creek, Little Rock Creek and Mad Creek.

Business and government entities in Gates include an elementary school, three churches, a motel, a fire department, a post office, stores, restaurants and the Gates City Park.

Detroit is positioned 44.73 degrees north of the equator and 122.15 degrees west of the prime meridian.

The Detroit Dam is 463 feet from the floor to the steep slopes of the North Santiam Canyon.

There are 33 miles of shoreline along Detroit Lake.

City Meetings

City Council: Second Tuesday, 6:30 p.m.

Planning Commission:
Fourth Tuesday, 6:30 p.m.

Detroit was founded during the construction of the Oregon Pacific Railroad. The name was selected because of the large population of people from Detroit, Michigan, who had settled in the region in the 1870s. A post office was established in 1891, and Detroit began to prosper as a center for the logging industry in the 1920s. The city of Detroit was incorporated in 1952, the same year that it was relocated to higher ground due to the construction of the Detroit Dam.

The completion of the dam, and the filling of the lake it created, transformed the city from a logging community into one of the most popular tourist attractions in Oregon. Detroit today offers an appealing balance of small-town friendliness and recreational excitement. The lake is a popular location for boating, fishing, swimming, sailing and other water sports. Aside from water activities there are opportunities for camping, picnicking, biking, hiking, hunting, and backpacking. In the winter, Detroit offers access to sledding and skiing.

Detroit features motels, bed and breakfasts, rental cabins, campground facilities, RV parks, and retreat and conference facilities. Restaurants, grocery stores and marinas offer their services and goods as well. The city hosts events held throughout the year, including the July "Fireworks over the Lake" celebration.

City Meetings

City Council:
Second Monday, 7 p.m.

Idanha's original name was Muskrat Camp. It later adopted the name Idanha, a name that was inspired by the Natural Mineral Water Company in Soda Springs, Idaho. The company bottled water called "Idan-Ha." The Oregon Pacific Railroad system was completed along the North Santiam River up to Idanha in 1889 but construction didn't continue eastward because of a lack of funding. The post office was established in 1895 and the city was incorporated in 1950.

Idanha is the smallest town in the North Santiam Canyon and the highest settlement along the North Santiam River. Located in the shadow of Mt. Jefferson three miles east of Detroit, Idanha has a store, café, post office, library, a city park, and a wood products manufacturer.

Idanha is located about halfway between Salem and Sisters.

Breitenbush Hot Springs

The Breitenbush Hot Springs, about 10 miles northeast of Detroit, were used by Native Americans for healing and ritual purification. President Theodore Roosevelt granted the land that includes the springs in a homestead patent in 1904. Merle Bruckman purchased the land in 1927 and converted it into a health spa, which he operated for more than 20 years. Alex Beamer bought the then-dilapidated facilities in 1977 and converted the area into the modern Breitenbush Hot Springs Resort & Conference Center.

In addition to its renowned hot springs, the center offers healing arts and massage, daily well-being programs, performances, hiking trails, and workshops. Breitenbush hosts more than 150 events each year. Visit www.breitenbush.com or call 503-854-3320 for information.

Nestled in a small valley a few miles from the towering old growth forests of the Opal Creek Wilderness area, Elkhorn Valley Golf Course offers 18 challenging holes of golf in what OregonGolf.com calls "one of the Pacific Northwest's most spectacular settings."

The award-winning front nine has captivated golfers of all abilities since 1976. The newer back nine takes advantage of all the natural topography and hazards that make this place so special - canyons, meandering streams, and wetlands and grand old stands of fir and other native trees. Natural grasses and brilliant wildflowers combined with the sights and sounds of wildlife are all around to form one of golf's most natural elements.

When it was still a nine-hole course, Sports Illustrated named Elkhorn the best course in America for its outstanding condition and pristine forest locale.

Located about five miles north of Gates, Elkhorn is accessible via Highway 22 by taking the North Fork Road east of Lyons-Mehama, or by taking the Gates Hill Road off of Highway 22 in Gates.

Willamette National Forest

The Detroit Ranger District of the Willamette National Forest administers the National Forest lands surrounding Detroit, Idanha and Breitenbush. National Forest lands are managed under multiple-use principles to provide a variety of recreational, commercial, aesthetic and resource benefits for the public.

A wide variety of recreational opportunities are available in the District. These include developed campgrounds, dispersed campsites, picnic areas, wilderness areas, scenic by-ways, an extensive trail system, and winter sports trails and shelters. Personal use permits for forest products such as firewood, plants, slate rock and mushrooms along with maps, books, brochures and forest information are available at the District office.

District, which is headquartered one mile east of Mehama on North Fork Road. The Forest spans parts of Clackamas, Marion and Linn counties.

Recreational opportunities include developed campgrounds, swimming, hiking, and equestrian trails. Upper and Lower Butte Creek Falls and Shellburg Falls are popular destinations for hikers and sight-seers. In 2008, the Crooked Finger Riders Association partnered with the Oregon Department of Forestry to develop a staging area and six miles of trail for ATVs and dirt bikes near Scotts Mills, about an hour north of Lyons.

Water Recreation

The North Santiam Canyon is home to some of the best water recreation in Oregon, with the North Santiam River and Detroit Lake offering opportunities for kayaking, boating, fishing, and swimming.

Detroit Lake is a multi-purpose water project, created by the Army Corps of Engineers upon completion of the 463-foot Detroit Dam in 1953. Powered by two generator units, the dam provides flood control, irrigation, power generation, and a recreational lake. Detroit Lake is nine miles long, holds 455,100 acre-feet of water and has 33 miles of shoreline. The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife stocks the waters annually with 125,000 rainbow trout along with fingerling rainbow trout, kokanee and Chinook salmon. There are also brown bullhead, largemouth bass and pumpkinseed in the reservoir.

The main game of the North Santiam River, Steelhead and Chinook Salmon, make their way to the area in May and remain until August. Substantial runs of these fish continue to be abundant in the North Santiam below Detroit. The downstream point of the fish runs is located at Packsaddle Park about 60 miles upstream from the Willamette.

The North Santiam is a popular spot for kayaking and float trips, with access to the river provided at many of the communities and at parks from Lyons and Mehama to Big Cliff Dam.

Hiking

Two trail systems offer visitors to Detroit Lake options in addition to fun on the water.

The trailhead for Tumble Ridge Trail #3380, a moderate uphill 5.3 mile hike, is located near Tumble Creek on the northwest shore of the lake. Trail #3381 to Dome Rock and #3379 to Tumble Lake, where campsites, huckleberries and Tumble Falls await explorers, branch off from #3380 after about four miles. Parking at Mongold Day Use Area is by fee or forest pass.

On the southeast bank, trail #3449 to Stahlman Point offers a moderate to difficult 2.5 mile hike from 1,700 to 3,000 feet. Osprey and their nests may be sighted along the trail, which ends at a former lookout site. The trailhead is 3.5 miles up Blowout Road.

Our History

Glaciers formed what today is known as the North Santiam Canyon, carving out the area from Lyons-Mehama to Gates, as well as the hollow where Detroit Lake now exists. The canyon served for centuries as a highway for Native Americans, especially the Santiam band of the Kalapooya, Klamath, and Warm Springs tribes. In the late 1870s, white settlers arrived from the Willamette Valley. Between 1888 and 1890, the Oregon Pacific Railroad penetrated the North Santiam Canyon and encouraged the growth of small towns along its path. Originally designed to be a transcontinental railroad before succumbing to financial difficulties, the railroad became a means for the transportation of huge quantities of logs to feed the Willamette Valley's timber industry, from Idanha to Corvallis.

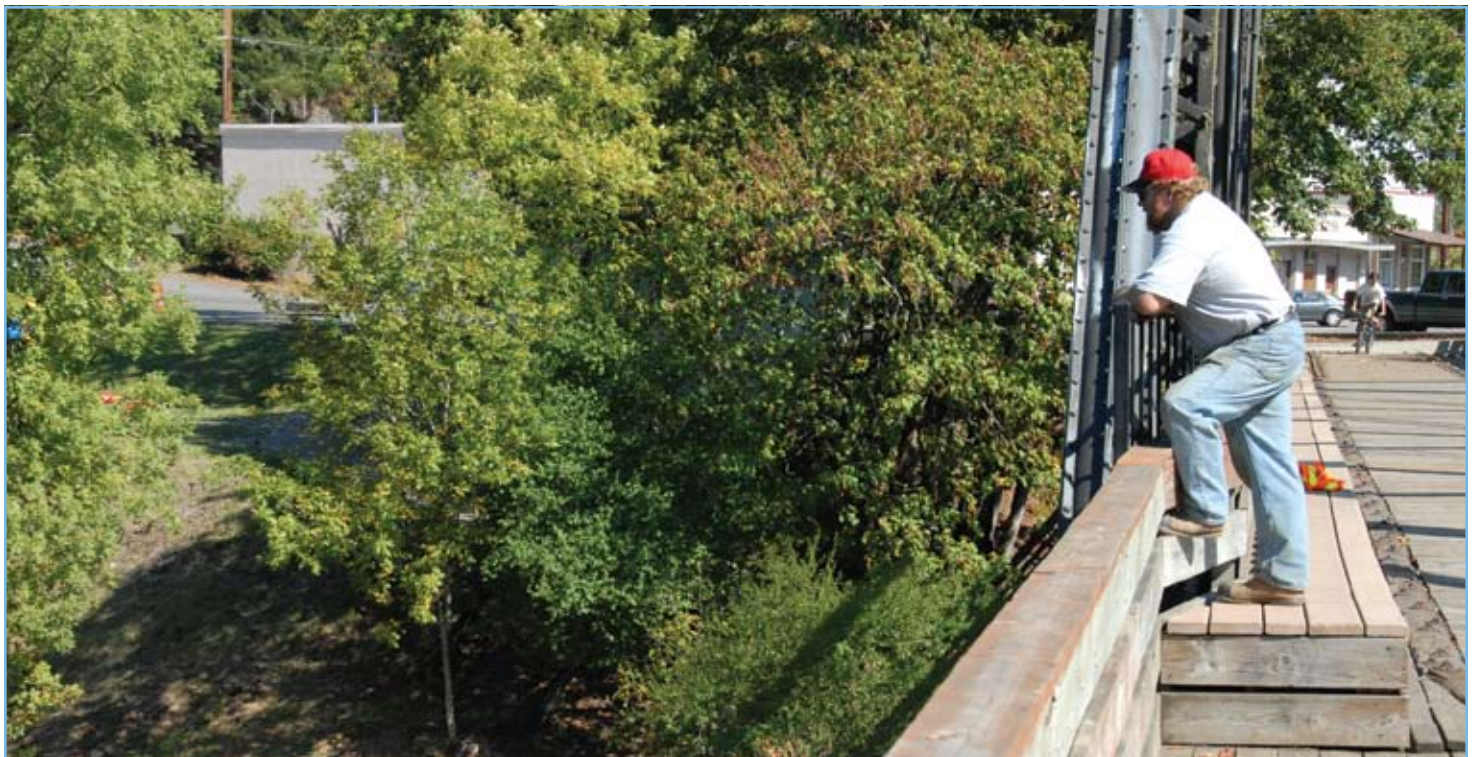

The canyon's economy was dependent on logging, farming, lumber mills, and mining for most of the late 1800s and early 1900s. The Hammond Lumber Company's mill, established in what would become Mill City, was one of the largest Douglas-fir mills on the West Coast.

To get an up-close encounter with local history and wilderness, visit Jawbone Flats. The old mining camp's historic 1920s buildings remain, giving visitors a sense of the life of the old west in the Oregon Cascades. Jawbone Flats is owned and operated by the Opal Creek Ancient Forest Center. Call 503-892-2782 for information.

The best way to learn about the area's rich and interesting history is by visiting the Canyon Life Museum. The exhibits vividly demonstrate the development of the canyon, including the fascinating life of early settlers. Read the diary of the young wife of a logger and examine the grainy sepia photographs of miners. You can also study the 3-dimensional topographic map of the canyon. The museum is located at 143 Wall St., Mill City in the 1927 Southern Pacific railroad depot. Those interested in visiting are encouraged to call 503-897-4088 or 503-897-2877 for information and hours of operation.

Service not available in all areas. Some restrictions may apply.

Freres Lumber Co. Inc. has been manufacturing wood products in the Santiam Canyon since 1922.

The company's 450 employees are safely and conscientiously producing lumber, veneer and plywood to meet America's residential, commercial and industrial needs. Freres truck drivers haul millions of miles annually, accident free, providing a valuable delivery service to our customers.

2010 marks the second anniversary of operation of Evergreen Biopower LLC, which provides wood-fired steam to dry our veneer and condition our wood prior to manufacturing, along with producing enough green electricity to meet the needs of 7,000 local households.

Freres mills and power plant are open for tours. New employees are hired weekly, and anyone interested is encouraged to apply for employment. Telephone Tim McCollister at (503) 859-2121 for employment opportunities or a tour.
